What journeys

you've made,

spontaneous

flights taken!

No longer simply

ensconcing

travel and progress,

you're now

transported

by pent-up, righteous

anger.

In the ancient world today,

especially, you

chasten statues of

tyrants, fly

at dictators.

Your effect

on George Bush

is the opposite of

salutary.

Besides, never before were you so potent in the singular.

From comfortable

accomplice in dailiness

you've become an anti-offering.
